Registered Student Organization Constitution Checklist

Student organizations must be registered with either the Student Association or the Graduate Student Association, depending on whether the organization views itself as serving primarily undergraduate students or primarily graduate students, respectively.

Organizations registered with the Student Association are classified either as dependent organizations or subsidiary organizations. In general, organizations that receive blanket tax funding (i.e., the organization receives a set amount of money per student per year to supplement its other sources of funding) are subsidiary organizations, and organizations that do not receive blanket tax funding are dependent organizations. Any exceptions to this general rule are explicitly noted in the Constitution of the Student Association.

Because subsidiary organizations receive large amounts of student money each year, some additional requirements are placed on them to ensure they are accountable to students and conduct themselves as good stewards of student money; these requirements also serve to help students see what benefits the student body and the Rice community are receiving for their blanket tax money. These requirements include an annual review of subsidiary organizations' blanket tax spending, election of subsidiary organization leadership through the Student Association, and additional oversight of amendments to subsidiary organizations' governing documents.

If you have questions about whether your organization is a dependent or subsidiary organization or about how that classification impacts your organization, please contact the Student Association Parliamentarian.
